In paras 3 and 4 of his letter, the Comptroller suggests that the members may, for the sake of refreshments, subscribe at a ^{certain} rate and place the money in the hands of the Secretary to the Conference for making necessary arrangements for tiffin; and that, if this suggestion meets with approval, similar arrangements may be ordered for the Dasara so far as Govt. officers drawing daily allowances are concerned.

What is the Financial Rule or order which has been transgressed? (Art 604 near 7 Manual) - Is it that the Conference may not invite its own members to tea because those members draw halting katta for halts? Halting katta is for spending the night at the station of halt, & may or may not include tea - If the Comptroller's scruples shd prevail, the tea for Dakota & other members may also be objected to - Why not suppose that the TA of members is the TA accn-ing to the schedule rates plus cost of incurred - we cannot now go for rate & can we? At Dakota there is a State Dinner - If the objection is ~~always~~ like straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel.

I know that in some cases, the expenses of such little treats of courtesy have been borne by the Presidents or other officers conducting such meetings. But when the work taken of such members is (at any rate ~~with~~ respect to non-official members) honorary, even a ~~soulless~~ corporate body like the government can hardly ask them to pay for a cup of tea. Nor would it be quite nice to send bills to official members alone.

I do not know that the introduction of the human element into such associations (when done at such trifling cost) is opposed to any principle of right or expediency, or that it is not rather desir-

Submitted to His Highness.

The Comptroller requested to be informed whether the cost of providing refreshments for members of the Economic Conference when the General Conference and the Committees thereof meet and transact business is a legitimate charge against the grant allowed for expenditure connected with the Economic Conference when such members were given daily allowance or lava-jama. He also incidentally observed that the practice of giving such refreshments at Government cost in connection with the Dasara Representative Assembly meetings seemed to be objectionable and that instances of such expenditure should be gradually reduced and not added to. Mr. Chakravarti suggested that if, in the interests of work, long sittings should be held, the proper and convenient course would be for such members as desired refreshments to subscribe at a certain rate and place the subscribed amounts in the hands of the Secretary to the Conference to make the necessary arrangements.

2. The Comptroller was informed, in reply, that the expenditure incurred in providing refreshments to the members of the Conference may be admitted as the cost was not likely to be appreciable and that the new arrangement suggested by him would not be workable.

7

3. The Comptroller is not satisfied and seeks that the order of Government in the matter should be communicated to him through the Financial Department. This course is adopted under article 614 of the Mysore Treasury Manual. During six months ending with March 1912, the expenditure incurred on account of refreshments amounted to Rs.362/-.

Pages 5-8 of notes

4. The further discussions and opinions of the Councillors are contained in the office notes.

5. I submit the case for orders. I agree with the Councillors that the expenditure incurred in such acts of courtesy is in the interests of the public service.
